General Guidelines for the Personal Statement

Use these points to help you write an effective personal statement.

Do...

- 1. Your homework. Research the school and/or program to which you are applying.
- 2. Brainstorm. Take a personal inventory: What makes you unique? What research have you conducted? What are your career plans? What should the admissions committee know about you? Write honestly about what interests and excites you.
- 3. Write a coherent, well-structured essay. Give your essay direction with a unifying metaphor or analogy.
- 4. Write an interesting essay. Start with an attention-grabbing lead an anecdote, quotation, question, or engaging description of a scene.
- 5. End your essay with a conclusion that refers back to the lead, or completes your metaphor or analogy.
- 6. Revise your essay at least three times, asking yourself these questions: Are my goals well articulated? Have I demonstrated my knowledge of the school and/or program? Have I answered the question(s) asked? Is my voice being heard?
- 7. Ask someone else to critique your personal statement.
- 8. Proofread your personal statement by reading it out loud, or reading it into a tape recorder and playing back the tape.
- 9. Write clearly and succinctly.

Don't...

- 1. Don't summarize your entire life. Stay away from information that doesn't support your metaphor or analogy.
- 2. Don't start your essay with "I was born in..." or "My parents came from..." or "I've always wanted to be..." Avoid these hackneyed statements and clichés altogether.
- 3. Avoid listing. Don't simply reiterate your resume. Pick and choose two to four main qualifications to focus on.
- 4. Don't try to be funny. Gentle humor is okay, but you don't want to risk that the admissions committee won't get the joke.
- 5. Don't write what you think the admissions committee wants to hear. Be honest and yourself.

- 6. Don't emphasize the negative (low GPA, test scores) by giving weak excuses. Balance any weaknesses by also emphasizing your strengths.
- 7. Don't try to impress your reader with your vocabulary.
- 8. Don't rely exclusively on your computer to check your grammar and spelling.
- 9. Don't make things up. Remember, the purpose of the personal statement is to allow the admissions committee to get to know YOU.
